USE ART TO PERCEIVE MORE
IN CLINICAL PRACTICE AND BEYOND

Increasing Emotional Awareness and Empathic Intelligence

Friday September 20, 2019 from 6 to 8.30 pm

Override your blind spots. Become more effective. Expand your vision.

"Fantastic course. Therapeutic, informative, and reformative."

*"To increase my observation skills (goals) and do something creative;
these sessions exceeded my expectations."*

Enhance your capacity to observe, increase your emotional awareness and expand your point of view, three skill sets vital to clinical expertise and professional excellence in the 21st century.

Sessions include interactive discussions of art works; hands-on art and writing exercises; observational exercises; an examination of the relevance of perceptual know-how in clinical settings and professional settings; and take away perceptual-art techniques.

Who should attend?

Physicians, medical students and all medical personnel as well as all students and professionals interested in overriding their blind spots and enhancing their observational, reflective and creative problem solving skills.

Art experience is welcome but not necessary

Increasing emotional awareness and empathic intelligence:

Sept. 20, 2019, from 6 to 8.30 pm

Working with associations and interpretations elicited from selected works, you further a nuanced emotional and self-awareness and explore its impact on observation, engagement and communication skills.

Cost

- $125 per workshop (includes the museum entrance fee)
- $90 for students (includes the museum entrance fee)

Location: The MET Museum in NYC
